[Subcellular localization of two polysomal RNA genes. II. Differential localization of the two genes in the rat liver cytoplasm]. In this work we have proved by hybridization experiments with labelled satellite DNA that two kinds of messenger RNAs are synthesized in the cytoplasm of the rat liver cells. The probes were obtained from two highly repeated sequences, representing 20% of the total DNA of the rat liver cell nuclei. The first sequence is located on the satellites of group D9 and the second, on the satellites of group D7. For the first sequence, the cytoplasmic localization was demonstrated with the poly (A)-containing fraction. However, the satellite DNA region of group D7 was not localized in the cytoplasm but was found in the cytoplasmic polysomes.1. Field of the Invention The
