MexicoElevated respiratory rates and breathing movement in the preterm born developing lungs.

Since preterm infants in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) have reduced lung volumes and compliance, we hypothesized that the regulation of breathing would also be reduced, and that breathing rates would be increased. We measured breathing movement during quiet and active breathing in 26 preterm infants to determine whether breathing movement was normal in premature infants. Also, we compared the strength of supramaximal passive inspiratory/expiratory muscle contraction ( $P_i/E_j$ ) in the premature and full-term infants. Breathing
