Ample.Sound.AGM.Library-R2R.x64.R.itdDo patients with symptoms of rheumatic and/or autoimmune diseases have different attitudes towards general practitioners in Austria than people without these diseases? Patients with chronic disease are often dissatisfied with their general practitioner (GP). The purpose of this study was to examine how much the views of patients suffering from rheumatic or autoimmune diseases differed from the views of the general population. As part of a larger study, a random sample of 1000 patients from five centres in northern, southern and eastern Austria was interviewed by telephone.
