On their current US tour, however, they're playing one of the most intimate venues in the US – a baseball stadium. It's a venue that members of the band met whilst they were recording their album St Anger in the Louisiana bayou city of New Orleans. "Some of us would go and visit the lberville prison where they store records," bassist Mike Clink told ESPN. "It's a classic building, an old prison with cool old brick walls. There's a little stage in there. There was a two-hour long recording session there. "Basically they shut the doors, the record company said, 'Go on in there and shut the door.' We were out of there so fast. There's nothing but prison bare in the windows, toilets in the back, lockers. We were walking around the halls and everything was in the same way as it was in the recording studio. The band got there, they thought it was an abandoned prison. They didn't even know where the toilets were. We were there for two days and two nights and just recorded it." A new generation of classic album collectors As well as being a replica of the little stage Metallica played in the recording studio, Old Trafford is also a replic
