A recombinant adenovirus carrying the RGD peptide sequence of the cell attachment sites of integrins  $\alpha\beta6$  and  $\alpha\beta3$  and 7  $\times$  His-tagged extracellular domain of integrin  $\alpha\beta6$  (E6-RGD) was constructed and the specificity of the adenovirus in vitro infection was investigated. B3-D-FM and  $\beta6$ -D-FM were established using mutant integrin  $\alpha v$  subunits and integrin  $\alpha v\beta 6$ . An adenovirus-mediated ex vivo expression system was established using the two B cell lines and the specificity of the adenovirus infection was demonstrated by comparison of its in vitro expression and in vivo expression using the two B cell lines. After infection of the adenovirus to both the cell lines, the receptor was labeled with  $7 \times$  His-tagged E6 (E6-RGD) protein and characterized by flow cytometry and confocal microscopy. Ex vivo labeling in the B cell lines showed similar expression and localization to the in vivo expression and was suitable for ex vivo analysis of the integrin. This method can be used to screen small-molecule integrin antagonists and may be used to investigate the in vivo

Magic Potion Millionaire is a sequence of "investment games" played on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation television game show Winning Streak, at least as of October 4, 2012. It is aired on CBC Television on Monday nights as the "Million Dollar" in many parts of Canada. History Like the original Winning Streak, Monday nights has also seen a succession of prize multiplication increases until the Magic Potion Millionaire was introduced to Winning Streak on Oct 4, 2012. On the first "Special Edition" of Winning Streak the automatic grand prize was increased to $1,000,000 and the game became $1,000,000 a show. The show was sponsored by Molson Canadian and is a one or multi-game variation of the original Canadian game show Million Dollar Money Drop. Game play The Million Dollar Game is a racing game with three teams from across Canada. The team or teams are led by one, two or even three people. The first team to complete some time limit has to take the million dollars prize. Teams are chosen according to their win record over the preceding ten matches. The team with most wins is chosen first, or with the time limit used to break ties. The actual race (and consequently the play of the Million Dollar Game) can be either a straight time racing game, or a finish and go competition. The time limit is typically four minutes though after its introduction in 2012 the limit was reduced to a mere two minutes with the skill of teams. To increase the time pressure for teams, winner take all games are not played on consecutive Mondays, thus a Monday with a tie needs to be played first. Any team in a pre-tied game can choose the next round of play, to be played without other team members' participation. After a contestant won the million dollars during the first edition of this game, the $100,000 top prize game was added. This game is played over a different time limit, almost invariably just under 5 minutes, though can be slightly increased to 5.5 minutes. The rules of the 1-2-3 races (i.e., the time frame of the game) and the game board are completely different from that of the original Million Dollar Money Drop, as above its series premiere the revised $2,000,000 edition of the game, which is played with a time limit of ten minutes. Unlike the former, the time frame of the revised game is also not 12 rounds, but 24,
