Traveling to the Alamo? Here are some Alamo safety tips (KUT.org) If you plan to visit the historic site in San Antonio, check out some of these Alamo safety tips. Get there early. The San Antonio Riverwalk, the busiest section of the San Antonio River, will likely be inundated with tourists. Traffic will be heavy during the day. Parking will also be difficult and the park will be crowded. The best time to visit is early in the morning. Try to visit in the off-season if you are able. No dogs. While not uncommon at national sites, in San Antonio it will be frowned upon. Don't feed the birds. They are natural predators of snakes, but they will eat bird seed that you put out for them. Look for signs, maps and your destination information before leaving for the Alamo. Any personal belongings should be stored in lockers outside of the Alamo or take a separate bag for them. If you have a stroller or baby, store them in the special infant lockers. Don't bring a backpack; carts are provided. If you have any of the above carry-on items, such as bags or bags for clothing, lock them in your car. Parking will be tough. Most people can't find a spot. Don't leave valuables in your vehicle. Keep everything locked and have a plan on where you will leave your vehicle. Bring water for yourself and pets. Do not leave them in your vehicle. Check to see if there are signs about security. Make sure you have a family plan, as visitors of any ages can enter the site, but children under 5 cannot be admitted without an adult, and anyone under 18 must be accompanied by an adult or a parent. Be vigilant of any strangers, especially at night. Be aware that photography is allowed. Be aware that you can be photographed by people posing at your car window. If you are concerned about this, take a couple of pictures with your flash turned off. Make sure your belongings are visible to the people around you. It's illegal to smoke, drink or eat within the Alamo. Some people advocate not speaking to people directly, instead finding designated Alamo Ambassadors.
