The King of England! Prince William has been spotted in Hyde Park in London today (June 14) sporting a very familiar pair of wellies. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were spotted touring the park which is a favourite spot for the couple with children George and Charlotte who are aged four and two, respectively. Also in attendance were the Prince's elder brother, Prince Harry, and his family. Prince Harry, 32, was dressed more formally in a blue shirt and blue jeans, and looked smartly dressed in a navy blue double-breasted suit. Prince William, 36, though, appeared casual in a pair of green Wellies, although they were perfectly accessorized with red braces and a tan faux-leather jacket. Such a British classic. He's so cute! Harry looked cool and casual in his navy suit. Prince William has appeared in his Wellies several times since they first went on sale in 2008. He's been seen in them at various events since 2010, as well as when he was wearing them on his wedding day. A source told the Daily Mail that the Duke wore the pair because he enjoys wearing "suitable, practical footwear." "He is as practical about his footwear as he is about other essentials like his phone," the source said. "Obviously, he will swap them for walking boots when he goes out to walk the dog, but he will always wear suitable, practical footwear for any occasion." The source said that the Duke of Cambridge has been spotted in the same shoes at the Olympic Games in London last summer.
