9/5/2015: I downloaded a program here that supposedly could convert CCDV4 to CCDA (the other CCcam version). It never works for me! It tells me it can't convert, but I'm not sure I can trust this app anyway. I will try the DVDFab 10PC and see if it converts a little better. It's so easy to capture my TV screen and play it back on my PC by using a video capture card, even when the video and sound are out of sync. With CCcam program, I can easily set up a network streamer. So far it works fine, I can convert one or two video/audio files to 8 bit audio files. I am having problems. Do not know if this is the right board or not. I am using z1000 pro and the software that came with it to convert the video. So I tried to change to the avia software to convert. I am trying to learn. I can convert a file no problem, but when I go to move it over to the other software, the video will only play back for a few seconds and then stop. If I try to run any software that is suppose to convert the file, it just sits there like its frozen. It would be nice if someone could explain what I am doing wrong. I have the z1000 pro converter and the avia software that came with it and tried using it under a different name. Also I have tried different packages. I have all the files needed. Thank you for your time. I would appreciate any help. How do I convert my images to videos in ccdv4 format? I already have the CCCV4 converter however it isn't converting correctly. It says: "ffmpeg error: see above" when I open the file in avia. I have also downloaded and tried to convert images to videos in ccdv4 format and have the same problem. Is there a free ccdv4 converter available for windows?
