But there have been no charges or allegations of any criminal wrongdoing by any party, and Mr Turnbull may be referring only to a late breach of the ABS's code of conduct by Dr Peter Baume and the newspaper that employed him. Credit:Andrew Meares The executive director of the ABC, Kim Williams, previously stood down over the affair after being stood down herself by former prime minister Julia Gillard. The ABS reported to the accounting watchdog that Dr Baume and an assistant had been found guilty of a "significant breach" of the contract, which required them to submit regular reports about new media they covered. Dr Baume's contracted work with the Department had ended as of February 2016, and the assistant left the department in September. The department gave Dr Baume a 12-month suspension with pay, and put Dr Baume on leave. Dr Baume was eventually given a termination of his contract by the ABC, which he challenged in the Federal Court. A spokesperson for Dr Baume said "preliminary legal proceedings" were ongoing. "We are not going to go further than that at this stage, but, as always, are prepared to address any issues that relate to our work with the department," he said. The department's head of corporate communications, Brett Warren, said he was "not able to comment on the case". The matter of Dr Baume's sacking from the ABC has already been resolved in court, leaving the breach of contract with the ABS as the only outstanding matter. A spokesman for the ABC said that the Commission for the Accountability of Public Officers had found that "the matters raised by the department did not amount to an offence under the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 1999". But the secretary of the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, Michael Pezzullo, has told the PMO that the department's $25,000 in legal fees should be repaid. "The department disagrees with this characterisation of the
